Local Postal Business Shows City's Growth

The best and most convincing evidence of the population and business growth of any community is that afforded by postoffice figures. Carmel's advance in the past seven years is shown by the following figures:

Receipts for the year 1917, $4,222.49; 1922, $9,026.16; 1923, $10,343.90; 1924, $13,084.60.

Receipts for last 3 months of 1917, $1,018.79; 1922, $2,394.52; 1923, $2,900.05; 1924, $3,673.53.

Money orders issued during 1917, $2,642.00; 1922, $3,883.00; 1923, $3,942.00; 1924, $5,079.00.

The three cities of the Monterey Peninsula, Carmel, Monterey and Pacific Grove, combined, also show a very substantial increase, as revealed by the figures herewith:

Postoffice receipts for the year 1917, $33,696.94; 1922, $49,350.93; 1923, $54,874.17; 1924, $62,532.41.

These figures show that the total postoffice receipts for a period of SEVEN YEARS show an increase of nearly one hundred per cent.

Money orders issued during 1917, $19,198.00; 1922, $26,041.00; 1923, $28,332.00; 1924, $32,205.00.

Local Merchants Want Streets Cleaned Regularly

The merchants on Ocean avenue and Dolores street, who pay the bulk of the business licenses, have been discussing informally the matter of clean streets.

They claim that the impression that the visitor gets when he enters the city is very unfavorable, that their goods are frequently ruined, that sand and debris are carried and blown into their places of business.

The city trustees will be asked to provide that a portion of the license collections be set aside to be used for a one-time-a-week street cleaning, the work to be done by the man now regularly employed on street work.

George Ball Announces Next Month's Shows

For his second presentation of three one-act plays at Arts and Crafts Theater, to be given on Friday and Saturday, March 13 and 14, George Ball has made a splendid selection.

The show will open with "Sham," by Frank Thompson. This will be followed by "The Man in the Cab," Franz Motnar's celebrated work, and the evening's entertainment will close with Robert Louis Stevenson's "The Sire de Maletroit's Door."

Several new people will be seen in these plays, types specially fitted to portray musical characters. It is planned also to have an orchestra on this occasion to perform during the plays and between acts.

Tickets will be on sale on Monday, March 2, at the establishment presided over by Tom Bickle.

Pageant of Youth

San Francisco's Civic Auditorium will be transformed into a huge amphitheater during the presentation of the great "Pageant of Youth," musical masque, to be staged with 1,000 players, April 1 to 5, inclusive. Five evening performances will be given, with matinees Saturday and Sunday.

The vivacity of youth, colorful costuming and a magnificent musical score played by a symphony orchestra of fifty, under the direction of Achille Artigues, will be features of the "Pageant of Youth." It is presented for the benefit of St. Ignatius College, Rev. R. A. Gleeson, S. J., is general director.

Interesting visitors in Carmel this winter are the Misses Sallentine of Milwaukee. Miss Eda has been accompanying Mrs. Roberta Leitch at several informal recitals and has been greatly appreciated for her artistic work and exquisite tone shading, both in accompaniments and solo work.

City Trustees Appoint Fraser Deputy Assessor

After the reading and adoption of the minutes of three previous meetings of the city board of trustees, and after a resolution had been passed to proceed with the work of improving Seventh avenue, the board rested while City Clerk Van Brower telephoned to Monterey to learn when City Attorney Argyll Campbell would put in appearance.

While the trustees and the public awaited the arrival of the legal gentleman, Trustee Dennis reported for the East Carmel committee that a main artery—Ocean avenue, Carpenter street, thence to the highway—be taken care of by the property owners.

In the matter of fire protection in East Carmel, Dennis suggested that a four-inch main be put in. Miss Kimball asked if a main were feasible and Trustee Larouette replied in the affirmative. Are water available the main would afford ample protection.

Trustee Helen W. Parkes reported that of the trees on public property, most of them should come down. Perry Newberry, paraphrasing Senator Dial in his eulogy of the Alaska husky, made an impassioned plea for saving dead trees as well as live ones. City Forester William L. Tower replied to Newberry, saying that "as usual Mr. Newberry does not know what he is talking about."

Specifications for the proper removal of the trees will be prepared by the city attorney. It is possible that such specifications will include consideration of the disposal of firewood.

It was reported that R. G. Watkins, whom it was proposed to name as deputy assessor, would not act.

A petition, bearing the names of 209 property owners, resident and non-resident, asking that the proposed zoning ordinance be adopted, was read.

Trustee H. P. Larouette moved that former Trustee Alfred P. Fraser be appointed to the position, at five dollars a day, the work to be done in thirty days. Carried.

During the course of the foregoing proceedings, President W. T. Kibbler announced several five-minute recesses, suggesting that the people outside the rail "talk it over."

The zoning ordinance was given its first reading, preparatory to final passage, which is said to be favored by three trustees.

Carmel Musicians Married Last Month

Miss Helen Otis and Walter Kelsey, both of this city, were united in the holy bonds of matrimony last Saturday morning. The ceremony took place at the home of the bride. Rev. Fred Sheldon of Carmel Church was the officiating clergyman. The bridesmaid was Miss Doris Evans of Oakland, and Ivan Kelsey, brother of the groom, was best man.

A dainty wedding breakfast was served after the ceremony, which was attended by Mr. and Mrs. Henry Kelsey, parents of the groom; Mr. and Mrs. Ney Otis, parents of the bride; Mrs. Fisher, grandmother of the groom; Ivan Kelsey, Mrs. Amanda Cochran, Rev. and Mrs. Fred Sheldon, Mrs. Horace Cochran, Miss Doris Evans.

Both Mr. Kelsey and his bride are accomplished musicians.

Beloved School Teacher Passes Away Here

The many months of illness suffered by Miss Etta M. Tilton, pioneer resident of this city, was ended by death last Saturday morning.

Miss Tilton was born in Santa Clara county seventy-one years ago. For twelve years she was superintendent of schools of San Mateo county. Seventeen years ago she came to Carmel to make her home, during part of which time she was a teacher in the local public school. Many Carmel young folks, now grown, were her pupils.

Miss Minnie Tilton, deceased's sister, resides here.

The remains were interred in the family plot in San Mateo.

Public School Building Needed

The voters of Carmel and adjacent territory and Pebble Beach will be called upon on Friday, March 27, to vote $50,000 in school bonds for a new Sunset District school.

The issue will cover two propositions—one for $45,000 for a new building, the other for $5,000 to secure final title to realty which the board is buying under contract.

Attorney Argyll Campbell has been retained to handle the legal proceedings connected with the bond election.

Sunset School District needs a new school house that looks less like a sunset and more like a school.

Five years ago two rooms were sufficient for the children in Carmel's public school. Four years ago the first outside room had to be built to hold the overflow and an extra teacher secured. Three years ago the second outside room had to be built and a fourth teacher secured. This year the third outside room was put up between two Sundays and a fifth teacher introduced. Already each room is not only overcrowded, but impossibly and inconveniently over-crowded and cannot possibly be crowded any further.

This year the extra teacher is being paid by skimpings and savings from the "maintenance fund." Next year the county will provide another teacher, but it certainly will be necssary to have still another teacher to meet the increasing attendance, and one more room, if not more.

The original building is out of date in every conceivable way. The lighting of the rooms is bad! Cross lights from three directions are injurious to the children's eyes. The black board space is limited. Ventilation, of even the scarcest sort, is achieved only by drafts on some and heat on others. There is the most meagre arrangement for children's wraps, which must be considered at least on stormy days. There is no place for indoor lunches on such days. The toilet facilities are inadequate and verging on unsanitary conditions.

The hope of the trustees in the new building is not for a showy exterior, but for the best, most practicable school building, in which the very best opportunity for school work may be offered. Plans call for a building with six finished rooms (two more to be finished as soon as needed), so utilizing for the present the new smaller buildings on the original plot of the school property.

The trustees have been acquiring gradually most of the block north of the present school buildings. The idea is to have the new building among the trees, keeping to a unique and park-like effect in that block, while the site of the old building and the present playground may be developed into an athletic field, with baseball diamond, basketball, tennis and handball courts, with a playground for Carmel's children, supervised in summer as well as during school time.

Because of the recent additions to the town of two auditoriums, the Theater of the Golden Bough and the Arts and Crafts Theater, money will be saved by omitting an auditorium, but a large room for a general assembly of the school is indispensable, as every parent will agree who has tried to jack-knife herself into a primary seat or even to confine her nether limbs to an aisle already crowded with moving children, temporarily evicted from their own seats by guests.

The best school architects from around San Francisco and from Southern California are submitting plans, which will soon be on exhibition.

Shall we allow that hideous, antiquated building to litter all over the two blocks of school property, or shall we have a modern, up-to-date, well equipped, well lighted, sanitary, attractive, distinctive school building that will be the greatest possible asset to Carmel?

Week-end guests at Roberta Leitch's Carmel Studio were Miss Ethel Higgins of Piedmont, a frequent visitor in Carmel, and a buyer of exclusive Oriental art goods; Miss Grace Blake, Roy Clark, Mr. and Mrs. A. Querre, Mr. F. Johnson.

A New Study of Historic Monterey

One of the most compact and useful collections of facts about historic Monterey, first capital of the State, has been compiled by Mr. A. C. Jochmus. In a little booklet of forty pages or so, he has given us a survey of events which sketch the development of the most interesting community in California, from earliest times to the present day.

Beginning with "the discovery of Monterey by Juan Rodrigues Cabrillo, a Portuguese navigator, sailing under the flag of Spain," he goes on to the landing of Gaspar de Portola with Junipero Serra in 1770, who shortly took possession in the name of the King of Spain.

In well-arranged chronological order, the writer shows how, from this time on one man after another came from different parts of the globe—each bringing his traditions and the characteristics of his country to bear on the fast-growing life of the new city.

Through the Spanish era, 1770 to 1822 the Mexican era, 1822 to 1847, and the American era from 1847 on, he gives us a succession of events and anecdotes which cannot fail to interest all lovers of Monterey. They should also be of great service to writers and to anyone who wants clear, concise facts, unencumbered with useless words.

There are lists of governors, mayors, padres, artists and other celebrities, as well as many pictures of old landmarks, famous men, and historical events. Many forgotten stories, having direct bearing on the growth of the city, make interesting reading.

Altogether, it is a valuable little treatise which should be welcomed by everyone wanting dates, facts and historical notes about Monterey, arranged in a careful and pleasing manner, and Mr. Jochmus is to be complimented on the way in which he has accomplished his task.

The Cat Question

As stated before in this column, there is a city ordinance which requires that all cats and dogs in the town must be licensed. As there still seems to be misunderstanding on the part of animal owners that this ordinance is in effect, it appears wise to again print the two ordinances which pertain to cats.

I.—It is unlawful for any person to have charge, care, control of or to harbor any cat unless a license fee of 50 cents is paid and receipt obtained and kept for exhibition to humane officer or pound master.

II.—All unlicensed cats are to be impounded and kept for three days.

These laws were passed as a protection to the responsible residents and their own pets from the annoyance of the careless and irresponsible, on the assumption that if you care for a pet you will be willing to pay to keep it, also on the human failing of many to value most that for which they pay money.

Also, the ordinances are fostered by the humane because they know that most cats are happier dead than hungry and hunted.

The local humane society at present is not handling the stray animal problem—it has been given over by the city to Ralph Miller.

Unless you have cases of neglect or cruelty to report, please do not bring complaints to the officers of the Humane Society. If you have lost your pet cat, if you have failed to register your cat or dog, if you know of a stray cat or dog, or if you are annoyed by a homeless cat or dog, report it to the city.

If you know of any cases whatsoever of cruelty, suffering or neglect, report them to State Humane Officer Miss Louise Conger.

The Higher Thought services will be held tomorrow at 2:30 at the Mansfield-Wilson cottage, between Eighth and Ninth on Dolores. Subject: "Lent, Its Significance to the Student of Metaphysics." Classes Tuesdays and Wednesdays at 8 p. m.

Sharks	3	1	.750
Sardines	3	2	.600
Whales	2	2	.500

Goldfish	0	5	.000

The Seals took first place in the Hooper cup series last week by beating the Sardines. Rain resulted in the game being called, and the 8 to 6 count for the completed five innings goes into the record as the result of the game.

The Seal-Sardine game was the second of the trio scheduled for the afternoon. In the first the Goldfish took their weekly beating. This time it was the Sandabs who larruped the last place outfit, to the tune of 13 to 5. The Goldfish have still to win a game in the series.

The Whale-Shark battle with which the afternoon was to have been concluded was prevented by the rain. It will be played as part of the program tomorrow.

In the first of last week's games Ernie Schweninger continued his fine pitching for the Sandabs, and Neb Lewis and Fred Godwin featured with their batting and fielding. Jo Mora provided one of the spectacular plays of the second game by holding on to a looping outfield fly although the treacherous footing upended him with an acrobatic flourish.

JUST KIDDING

Being the Semi-Serious Musings of Carmel's Own Sam Pepys

WHAT IS CARMEL? Truly we cannot answer. It is a community, but unlike any other community on the face of the earth. It is the Nantucket of the West—Colorful, flowerful, unique; conservative, liberal; sad, mad, reposeful, startling; artistic always. Carmel is a cocktail. In it we find the beauties of nature blended with romance and history. In it is a suspicion of Florence, two fingers of Amalfi, a dash of Anacapri as seen from the parapet of The Paradiso. Sweetened with a lump of moon-drenched Rome, a poppy behind our ear, we stir with our finger and sip slowly while staring across snowy dunes at a cobalt and silver sea.

CARMEL is an earthly paradise, a foretaste of heaven, a place where health and an abundant measure of happiness await beneath the pines. Here doctors find few patients, thanking a compensating Providence for polo bruises and an occasional sacrifice to the god Motor. Here poet and peasant meet on common ground. Here calico and cashmere dwell in perfect harmony; corduroy and tweed march hand in hand.

AGAIN, CARMEL is a snug harbor; a haven for battered hulks long buffeted and tossed on the ocean of life. Here, out of the fairway, is moored the once-splendid liner, proud of her age, stately even in decay. And alongside, bobbing serenely at its kelp-swathed cable, we find a penny-a-liner, a yawl of sorts with saucy prow. Here, too, anchored for all time, are merchantmen and square-rigged ships of wood. Some of them have voyaged afar. Under the lee of the Spice Islands, on an indigo sea, the gentle touch of the monsoon has pressed against their courses; the perfumed night wind has been the herald of their morning landfall. Romance has fallen to their lot. They roll contentedly at their moorings, displaying barnacled planks to the friendly thrust of the wave.

ALAS for the other craft which have ever hugged the shore—or perchance have never sailed! For teredoes bore at rotting keel of all alike. Creatures of the sea play tag around them. Rats scamper through their slimy bilges. Yet, here and there, we are not surprised to find a carnation peeping out of a broken bottle—a carnation; dewy, fragrant and unafraid. For it is Carmel.

PURSUING THIS IDEA further, we grant you that there are living craft in this harbor. Noisy visiting launches put! put! by day and by night. Always in evidence, hogging the light and seeking by sheer noise and varnish to intrigue the attention of the public, we cannot but notice them. More pleasing to the eye are the pleasure craft. From the spill of their chiffon sails we in the lee catch a whiff of Le Lys Noir—or is it Jasmin d'Isabel? They flutter around—God bless 'em!—stately ships whose skysail-yards graze the very stars, whose keels rake the granite reaches of the harbor floor. Speaking verily, there are sundry vessels here or on their way, ranging from houseboats where corks pop and saxaphones wail, to the sturdy but hated ferry-boat Commercial whistling hoarsely and blatantly for a justly denied right of way.

CARMEL IS 150 miles distant from San Francisco, and approximately twice that far removed from the transplanted Iowan settlement of Los Angeles ("Loase-angha-leeze" please), where flowers and grass grow if you coax and coddle them. Carmel has grass and flowers throughout the year. It has neither factory nor railroad to disturb the serenity of those who there dwell. The clang of the trolley-car is not heard in the land. Here are earnest folk who do fine things. Here also are clowns and dabblers at the various arts, eager to breathe the same air with genius, to glow in its reflected light. But there is room for all. One may wear a smock, prate of batik or Ibsen, for all one's neighbor cares. One may part his name in the middle, perch shell-rimmed glasses on his nose, and to all intents and purposes he becomes a stone in the literary mosaic of Carmel. Nobody cares a hoot from whence comes the money to foot the bills. For Carmel, above all things, is tolerant and uninquisitive.

APTLY NAMED "The Circle of Enchantment," the Peninsula of Monterey and its charm is being touted to a credulous reading public. Speaking frankly, we cannot see anything except Carmel and its contiguous Highlands. Comparisons are odious, we believe, and this holds true particularly when comparing Monterey with any other pueblo of the peninsula. Take the cigarette, for instance: Granted Monterey women are practically compelled to smoke. Monterey is a canning man's town. And within the puritanical precincts of Pacific Grove female worshippers at the shrine of the Cork Tip have to "sneak their drags." At Pebble Beach, in one's fifty-thousand-dollar villa, one summons one's butler. 'Awkins fetches 'em on a silver tray. But in honest Carmel, glorious and straightforward Carmel, the girls smoke when and where they please. In other words, Monterey by any other name would smell as sweet; Pacific Grove is a hypocrite; Pebble Beach is a snob—which leaves nothing attainable in reason and strictly worth while within this Circle of Enchantment save Carmel, its Beauty Spot.

WE HAVE BEEN residents of Carmel for five months, and being naturally of a retiring disposition we have during the elapsed time made but five acquaintances. Our grocer having ceased to know us, we have left but four. This tends to prove that one may live in Carmel as quietly as one chooses. We may mix, or not mix. We are not called upon to be bored, to contribute to this nor that. In short, we are free to pursue in our own sweet way whatsoever may interest us. "Far from the madding crowd," in humble cabin or spacious lodge, we may gaze undisturbed on the miracle which has been wrought in our vicinage, absorbing at first hand the mysterious beauty of the sea, the green and bloom of the hills behind, the delicacy and charm of the flowers at our feet. It is Freedom! It is Carmel!

IT OCCURS to us, that in this man's town, Fred Leidig sells you something to make a fire out of, Larry Leidig sells you stuff to put on the fire, and Bob Leidig sells you something to put the fire out with. Ungrammatical, but true.

The Pine Cone Press in New Quarters

Last Monday morning the job of moving into enlarged quarters on Dolores street, opposite the postoffice, was completed. It was some job. Nobody lost his temper; nothing was lost; nothing was broken. Monday afternoon one of the new presses was functioning, with foot power and strong language. Now we are going electrically and just eating up the work.

ANOTHER MOVIE COMPANY HERE

Several members of the Normand-Dawn Producing Company arrived here last week from Hollywood and are quartered at Pine Inn.

In the group are Lee George Fisher, who is the male lead; Florence Smith, the female lead; Catherine Dawn and Steve Murphy.

The title of the picture to be filmed here has not been determined, but Mr. Murphy gives out the information that it is a sea picture, to which the Carmel coast line readily lends itself.

The entire company expects to be here a month.

On Thursday evening of last week a jolly crowd of friends gathered at the home of Mr. and Mrs. M. J. Murphy to assist them in celebrating their wedding anniversary. Among those present were Mr. and Mrs. Walter M. Basham, Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Scholl, Mr. and Mrs. R. E. Bonham, Mr. and Mrs. H. V. Follett, Mr. and Mrs. Paul Wall, Mr. and Mrs. R. W. Hicks, Mr. and Mrs. Ray Ramsay, Miss Eileen Montgomery, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Snyder, Richard Jelbert and Charles Hoehn.

PINE NEEDLES

Mrs. M. Coote has returned from Glendale, where she has been visiting Mrs. E. T. Little and family.

The regular monthly meeting of St. Anne's Guild will be held at the Rectory on Tuesday, the third of March at three o'clock

Mr. and Mrs. V. Barton, and Mr. and Mrs. Lee Parker and children, of San Francisco, were guests of Mr. and Mrs. T. Rask last week-end.

On Thursday, March fifth, there is to be a meeting of parents of school children at the Sunset School at 3:45 p. m. The matter of the voting of bonds for a new school house will be the subject of discussion. All voters interested are cordially invited to attend.

Mr. and Mrs. Kerr F. Albertson will spend next week in Los Angeles, Mr. Albertson attending the annual convention of the Builders and Distributers of Pacific Ready Cut Homes to be held at the home office, while Mrs. Albertson will visit relatives in Beverley Hills.

Plains and City and Sea.

The spring novels are only beginning to appear, says Collier's, and the one which will be read by most people is Zane Grey's "The Thundering Herd." Frank L. Packard returns to railroading in his "Running Special" and P. G. Wodehouse follows up the big success of "Leave It to Psmith" with a yarn just about as funny, "Bill the Conqueror." I have had a look at a fine American novel, "To Babylon," which will be published early in February. It is by Larry Barretto, author of "A Conqueror Passes," and is the story of a boy who went from Slaterville to New York to be an architect, and of what New York did to him and of what he learned for himself by the time he was thirty. Barretto, who was christened Laurence Breevort Barretto, comes of two fairly ancient New York families. The Breevorts arrived a little sooner than the Barrettos, who were Portuguese and did not get over until 1690. Larry says he has become quite used to being asked: "How long have you been here?"

If you like Joseph C. Lincoln don't miss his "Rugged Water," a tale of Cape Cod life savers, one of his best.

Projected Telephone Service for Carmel

"Looking into the future, one of the most important considerations to the telephone company and to the people in the area to be served, is the question of rate system. Estimates for the future of the Monterey peninsula communities show beyond question that to continue so-called 'unlimited service' between all peninsula communities would very shortly make necessary a substantial increase in all rates." The above statement is made by Local Manager R. P. Sexton. He continues:

"Our experience over many years with similar conditions indicates that, based on actual service needs, a large majority of the actual users prefer a system of rates which will give them exchange service with their local exchange and service with a toll charge in those cases where it is necessary for them to communicate with an adjoining exchange. This general system of rates is a much fairer distribution of charges than a system which assumes that all subscribers' needs are the same and that all should pay higher rates.

"The establishment of an exchange at Carmel will involve an estimated initial investment of nearly $75,000. This initial investment of $75,000 will provide sufficient plant and equipment to adequately care for the telephone requirements of Carmel and contiguous areas, not only at the time of the establishment of the exchange, but for several years thereafter.

"Substantial additional outlays will be required during the five-year period subsequent to the opening of the exchange, and it is estimated that the investment at the end of that period will be close to $100,000.

"The question has been asked why the telephone company does not provide another cable from Monterey to Carmel to relieve this situation. This is answered by the statement that the present cable has only been, from a telephone standpoint, a temporary measure for serving Carmel. To add an additional cable to this pole lead would only provide another temporary expedient, as by the present figure of growth the exchange would be needed within a year anyway. And then 75 per cent of the wires in the present cable would be useless.

"The telephone company has always taken a very lively interest in the development of the Monterey Peninsula, and it has been increasingly clear to them during the past three years that to serve the area adequately and economically in the future the rearrangement of the present plan would be necessary, as up to the present time the growth has been so rapid that the present method of serving the subscribers from the Monterey Exchange has been taxed to its capacity, so the only alternative to offset this is the establishment of an exchange in Carmel serving Carmel, Pebble Beach, Carmel Highlands, and Carmel Valley."

Mrs. Valentine Mott Porter will spend the week-end in San Francisco, seeing Otis Skinner in Sancho Panza.

Old Bing has gone to his reward. Who was Bing? He was the faithful Turner dog. He grew up with the family, and for seventeen years he was always on the job.

Mr. Arthur Bragg, who spent the last week-end at the home of his parents, Mr. and Mrs. E. B. Bragg, has returned to Stanford with his house guest Mr. Harrison Todd.

To Halt Jassing of Grand Operas

The harm done by jazz music to the younger generation may be measured in dollars and cents. Such is the belief, at least, of Francis E. Woodward, professor of music in Spokane, Wash., who, in order to prevent the playing of modern versions of operas by Wagner and Liszt today brought suit against a Spokane orchestra and its leader for $10,000. The professor sought to have the orchestra restrained from playing opera airs in syncopated time as announced at a concert set for Thursday night.

"Jazz music written for jazz dancing is all right," said Professor Woodward, "but jazzing the grand operas is a desecration, just as much so as jazzing 'Nearer My God to Thee.' It must be stopped."

Make Better Friends of Our Animal Friends

This department is edited by Eunice T. Gray, to whom all communications should be sent, in care of the Pine Cone.

Heard by Vibrations

"Jeff," a cross between a Newfoundland and an Irish Terrior was bred by Banker Cusik of Albany, Oregon. With his mate of the same breed, Jeff once defended a bank against burglars, driving them off and nearly killing one. He lived all his life on the Pacific coast, accompanying his owners, Captain and Mrs. H. M. Brown on sea voyages to Alaska. Although stone deaf for many years, Jeff found his way everywhere and followed his owners by vibrations of sound coming through the earth, even at a distance of one hundred yards. Once Captain Brown was believed to be lost in a storm and Jeff attended Mrs. Brown and the baby for three days and nights, without sleep and refusing food until a telegram came announcing Captain Brown's safety. Jeff deserved and was given an honorable burial.

Animal Preservation

When the earth is so populated that the beasts are crowded off, what a horribly cut-and-dried place the world will be! The feeling for animals dates from man's imagination's dawn. This is why, whenever a government acts to save a dwindling species—when the Briton puts game laws even on the misanthropic rhino, when the Mexican stops hunting of the Pinacate bighorn, when the Belgian creates a gorilla refuge—intelligent approval is heard everywhere. Even if the feelings were as childlike as Tommy's joy in his Noah's Ark, who wants to take his ark away before it is outgrown?

Sheep and Mountains Give Beauty to New U. S. Film.

A film entitled "Sheep in Psalm and Sage," just released by the United States Department of Agricultuure, pictures the sheep-raising industry of our West with special reference to the needs of schools and churches for films of a non-technical character.

Most of the scenes in this picture were made in the Shoshone National Forest, amid surroundings of exceptional natural beauty, and from the standpoint of scenic effects it is one of the most attractive pictures issued by the department.

Sheep in Psalm and Sage will be circulated through the film distribution system of the Department of Agriculture and the cooperating State institutions. Copies may be borrowed for short periods, the only cost being the payment of transportation charges both ways, or may be bought at the manufacturing charge by authorized persons and institutions.

Dogs on Automobiles

The Oregon Humane Society is sending out to the newspapers in all the states copy of the following bill to require protection of dogs carrid on automobiles. Here is the full text of the law:

Section 1. It shall be unlawful for any persons to carry a dog upon the hood, fender, running board or other external part of any automobile or truck, unless the same shall be protected by a framework, carrier, or other device sufficient to keep any such animal from falling from the said automobile.

Section 2. Any person who shall violate the provisions of this act shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor and shall be punished by a fine of not more than one hundred ($100) dollars, or by imprisonment in the county jail for a period of not more than six months, or by both such fine and imprisonment.

Section 3. Justices of the peace, district courts, county courts, and all other courts, having jurisdiction as justices of the peace, shall have concurrent jurisdiction with the circuit courts of all prosecutions under this act.

ROAD TO BIG SUR IS GOOD

With Miss Wright and Mrs. Morewood and her two daughters as passengers, Paul J. Denny made the trip to Big Sur one day last week. Mr. Denny reports the road excellent as far as Rainbow Lodge, and fair throughout with the exception of a little mud in the Redwood Forest.

"Never have I seen the Coast below more beautiful, the foliage and verdure a brighter green," declared Mr. Denny, after his return.

"Never have I had a smoother and more delightful trip than with Mr. Denny and his Buick," declared Mrs. Morewood, on the steps of the Monte Verde Apartments, where she is staying.

In the next issue of the Pine Cone a full report of the Denny Tire-Judging Contest will be given. At the hour of going to press but few persons have been able to distinguish between the new tire and the worn ones. Which speaks volumes in favor of the easy-riding Buick Six.

SUPPORT THE LOCAL LIBRARY

From time to time various affairs, such as lectures, exhibits, sales, etc., are given for the benefit of the Carmel Library. These affairs should be liberally supported. The library gives splendid service, and this service costs money. The regular income of the institution is very meagre—not sufficient for upkeep—so that to continue the work it is incumbent upon Carmel residents to cooperate in educational money-raising affairs.

Visitor Discusses Local Tree Question

Carmel, California,
February 23, 1925.

To the Editor:

As a visitor to your city, I should like to offer a bit of what I hope will prove constructive criticism in line with the splendid program for tree preservation undertaken by those in authority.

Knowing that it is the pines of Carmel which have made the beautiful resort famous from coast to coast, I have been made heartsick at sight of the ruthless destruction of every tree and many native shrubs on some lots—generally those upon which the most commonplace houses and starkest, most unsightly garages have been erected. (By the way, why can not garages be placed inconspicuously at the rear, as stables and tool-sheds were located in the past?)

And now that so many of these noble pines are wearing convict stripes, it seems time for prompt and decisive action on the part of an organized body of citizens, as public-spirited as the young man who treated and saved from annihilation that patriarch of the forest, the Vachel Pine. Can not Messrs. Bechdolt, Newberry and others, who, I am told, possess civic pride, be persuaded to interest a group of active men in volunteer work with the city planning commission? This should be begun at once in order to save as many marked trees as possible, both in the streets and on private property as well, where the owners are absent. Resident owners, too, should be encouraged to save their trees by proper surgery. If no other time is available, surely a few hours on Sundays, for a few weeks, would be no desecration of the day, and I for one would be only too glad to contribute a dollar or two toward the purchase of creosote or other necessary aids.

Comparisons are sometimes odious, but at other times they are a decided help in setting to rights our own ideas and those of our neighbors. It is with the hope that Carmel will derive benefit by recalling the havoc wrought in Pacific Grove by those whose foresight was all hindsight (and cross-eyed, at that), that I relate the following:

In my first visit to California, as a school girl, I was the guest of relatives who planned a week-end visit to Monterey and Pacific Grove, purposely that I might store my mind with memories of historic adobe buildings in the former place, and fill my soul with the natural and cultivated beauty of the latter spot. Accordingly, we drove from Salinas by team, automobiles being less common then than now, and camped in a lovely, pine-clad strip of hillside, in Pacific Grove, a site which overlooked the bay and afforded a wonderful view of both towns.

Here, I fairly reveled in a wealth of verdure. Trees grew on all sides. From center to circumference, Pacific Grove was a festooned and garlanded gem of beauty. No house was so stately, no cottage so humble, that it did not possess a riot of vines, fuchsias, Lady Washington geraniums and heliotropes trained to the eaves and often running rampantly to gables and combs.

Five years ago, I spent seven months in Carmel and eagerly awaited an opportunity to again visit Pacific Grove, and when it came——! Not a trace of its former luxuriance remained in the bleak and barren, breeze-swept place that man's "improvements" had made of it. Save in a few spots where good sense had prevailed, even the pines had been eradicated, root and branch, and while some attempts at restoration have since been made, it will require years of persistent and painstaking effort to retrieve even a fraction of the loveliness the promontory once was noted for.

In Monterey, too, the famed and romantic Home of the Sherman Rose has fallen before the craze for "improvement." Could the good people of that city but realize it, with each venerable adobe that goes, a portion of their claim to distinction disappears. It is the quaint, the unusual, the historic, that attracts tourists. Any "Main Street" village can have highways geometrically planned, houses like bird-cages, lawns prim as the blocks of a patch-work quilt, and garages and filling stations decorating every corner, but when people travel for pleasure it is the simple, the natural, the refreshing, that they go endless miles to seek.

Improvements must come, but why not use judgment and foresight when making them? Five years ago, I frequently walked down Ocean Avenue just to enjoy the shelter and creeping, irregular beauty of the acacias bordering the sides of the street. Upon my arrival, in November, I made one trip—to find most of these slashed down. When the pines on that same thoroughfare have been destroyed or are supplanted by "GOOD" trees (heaven save the mark), and others on the peninsula follow, the birds will go. When both have disappeared, tourists will cease to come.

To me the characteristic architecture of the majority of Carmel houses, their sheltered situation, and their artistic color combinations are a genuine joy, but unless a decided stand to save the pines is taken, much of the charm will soon be lost, and if my next-door neighbor is to be permitted to "queer" my best efforts to maintain an attractive home by installing a store, a garage or a gas tank immediately adjoining, I shall wait a good, long time before purchasing the property I have had in mind.

The man or woman who can see only board-feet or back-logs in a lovely tree is totally unfit to have a hand in your civic affairs. It is up to the loyal citizens of Carmel to elect to office only such persons as will cherish the wonderful natural beauty of the place, first, last and all the time.

MARY AGNES KELLY.

Miss Margaret Stewart, at her home on the Point, entertained a number of friends last Sunday afternoon. An impromptu vocal and instrumental program, with Roberta Arment Leitch as the feature, was much enjoyed.

Impressions and Comments; Third and Last Series

These reflections on Life and Art by Havelock Ellis, reveal the artist in the evening of his life, as sunny, thoughtful, and courageous as ever. H. L. Mencken says: "Havelock Ellis is undoubtedly the most civilized Englishman living today. His books take the reader into the company of one whose mind is a rich library. His style is as transparent as a crystal and yet it is full of fine colors and cadence. The extent of his knowledge is appalling, yet it has not dulled his sensitiveness to beauty nor his capacity to evolve it."

There is a gentle charm about these comments, written by one who is looking back over a long and varied life—a sense of having lived fully and completely. A certain majesty pervades the book, and his views of life, not as something finished—but as a vibrant onward motion, is full of beauty and inspiration. As he said in "The New Spirit," There is never a moment when the new dawn is not breaking over the earth, and never a moment when the sunset ceases to die. He does not dogmatically come to conclusions, but sheds the light of his ripe and seasoned understanding over the whole sad tangle of existence, doing more than anyone else of our day has done to simplify and explain the past and to light the dim path of the future.

Speaking of the final development of art as typified by Rodin, he shows how it moves through three stages: first, minute realism; secondly, the stage of exaggeration, and then, finally, the last period of "large, simple masses, softened and alleviated of all semblance to reality, gliding into a vast dim, dream." He shows how the artist discards details in his search after the essence of things, which he finally depicts with sure and certain strokes, etherealized beyond the conception of ordinary mortals, so that there has always been supposed, at this stage, a loss of power and a failure of energy.

In his response to beauty, Havelock Ellis is quick, spontaneous and delightful. He becomes enraptured with the blue eyes of a young girl seen for a few moments in passing; the first week in June with its wild flowers is an ever-recurring joy, and the waves and breakers on the Cornish Coast move him to exultation. The little tinrush who sang by his window was never more profoundly appreciated.

All moralists and censors should read his chapter on "The Philosophy of Obscenity." In a simple, direct and comprehensive way, he goes right to the heart of the matter. "Into every great and true picture of life, there must necessarily enter both its obverse and reverse sides." Art which concerns itself only with the ideal and the beautiful, cannot be complete or truly great. But it is only the great artist who can deal superbly with the reverse side of life—the blunderer becomes merely vulgar.

Apart from the philosophy of this book it displays a purity of style which is of itself invaluable, and distinctly characteristic of Havelock Ellis. His sentences are posed, rounded, perfect of themselves. He has, moreover, that rare art of expressing a profound truth in words so clear and poignant that the meaning rises immediately from the printed page. Herein lies, perhaps, his greatest charm.

Miss Rainier of the faculty of the San Jose high school is occupying the Fullager cottage on Mission street.

Mr. and Mrs. Basil Bancroft and children of Berkeley were here over the last week-end and were at the Yellow Lantern.

Mr. and Mrs. C. C. Guthrie of Sausalito are stopping at Pebble Beach. Their children and nurses are staying at the Yellow Lantern.

Ho! ye radio fans. What do you think? Col. Clare Foster got South Manchester, Conn., the other night. Don't worry; it won't cut you off.

The Misses Friant of San Jose were over the last week-end holidays. They had as guests Dr. and Mrs. Arthur McGinty and their son and daughter.

Mrs. L. B. Harvey and Mrs. Charles L. Harris have leased the Weathervane cottage on San Antonio between Eighth and Ninth avenues, for a year.

Miss Mary Phelps of San Jose, in the English department of the high school, was over the last week-end. Miss Phelps is a sister of Mrs. Argyll Campbell.

Mr. and Mrs. A. E. Wolff and children and Mr. Hill, Mrs. Wolff's father, are here from Berkeley. They are in their own cottage on San Carlos avenue.

Mrs. Florence Thornton, teacher in Sunset School, and Mrs. Etha Fox and children, motored to San Francisco last Saturday and returned Monday night.

Captain and Mrs. Jesse Derrick of the Monterey Presidio entertained at dinner Saturday evening last in the Old Cabin. The guests were Captain and Mrs. Gibbs, Mrs. Tatum, Mr. and Mrs. Lee, Miss Thompson, Lieutenant Devine and Lieutenant King.

Mrs. Wellington Clark of Carmel Highlands has left for the East on her way to Europe, where she will remain a year. She sails from New York on March 20.

Miss Dorothy Castelhoun is resting easily. She is still suffering from shock and bruises, the result of being thrown from a horse on Ocean avenue last Friday afternoon.

Next month Mr. and Mrs. A. G. Reynolds of Carmel Highlands will start on an extended trip abroad. They will sail from San Pedro direct to London, via the Panama Canal.

Harry Tachmund, in the federal service, was here over the holidays to visit his mother, Mrs. Mabel Gray Young. He is much interested in the local tree controversy, being an expert in the subject.

Mrs. Paul J. Denny is looking forward to the early coming of her daughter, Miss Mildred Dingley, from Los Angeles. Miss Dingley recently gave a very successful piano recital in a southern city.

Last Sunday's wind and rain storm did very little damage in this city. A few radio aerials were blown down and several awnings were badly torn. A eucalyptus limb crashed its way through the skylight of the H. W. Turner home.

Announcement has been made by E. G. Kuster that he will produce Harry Leon Wilson's "Merton of the Movies" in the Theater of the Golden Bough on July 2, 3 and 4. Unusual interest is being displayed in this announcement, especially since word comes that the author himself will assist in the production.
